I TALENT TRENDING

14 Workforce of the future
In an era where globalization and digital technology is changing the terrain and setting the ground for a new work atmosphere, it is time for organizations to address specific challenges and opportunities that matter most to the millennial workforce.

20 Talent in motion
The talent market is getting both global and mobile, and with multi-generational workforce aspirations in the tow, organizations are rethinking their strategies on global mobility to meet burgeoning business needs.

24 Adjusting the focal lens
The economy today is challenging and there is a dire need among organizations to have a framework to leverage their investments financial, technological and people alike. Hence, talent and organizations will need to become more flexible to respond to this change by altering their approach, methodology of doing business amongst other things.

30 The new-age employment contract!
Career aspirations and work attitudes have undergone a transformation. This has far reaching implications for companies building a talent pool.

II ENGAGING TALENT

36 Be a visionary, not an also-ran!
Organizations have to learn to leverage on their employer brand to engage candidates as well as employees to gain a competitive advantage and raise their visibility in the job market.

40 The surprising start-up sweepstakes
The fast evolving start-up culture that promotes, flexibility, freedom, quick growth, relaxed work environment among other things has disrupted the stereotypical, ideal workplace picture. Set to win the race? Or is it decidedly tougher to overthrow traditional employers in the war for talent.

54 A new engagement paradigm
Few organizations actually delve into what really drives employee engagement. Missing the big picture could be catastrophic when it comes to their ability to hold on to talent.

58 Are you talent ready?
With most companies turning into ‘One World Corporations’ from Multi-National Corporations, the concept of one-talent is likely to emerge faster than we can imagine. Get your company geared for this transformation now!

62 The connected workplace
With digital technology reshaping our lives in countless ways, organizations will need to re-orient their workplace offerings in line with evolving expectations and lifestyle of the talent pool.
III THE TECHNOLOGY TAP

66 Leveraging big data
Using Big Data in HR would empower organizations and help HR yield tremendous returns in terms of making informed talent decisions for talent acquisition.

70 Dialing into the future
In the age of Smartphone, mobile recruiting is the ‘in-thing’. To cater to this mobile savvy generation, it is critical for all companies to figure out how they can fit in mobile recruitment into their overall recruitment strategy and leverage it to get the best of the lot.

74 Career match-making digitized
Every year, millions of job seekers struggle to find the employer of their choice, while employers struggle to find the right candidate. Digital career fairs can be the answer.

IV BRIDGING THE GAP

78 Building home grown leaders
Talent scarcity is a reality that has put organizations across the globe in a tizzy. This only reaffirms the need to develop the internal talent pool, channelize employee aspirations in the right direction and most essentially, motivate employees to develop themselves.

82 Honing the new-age talent
As the war for talent intensifies, actively engaging employees will become paramount. This would need not just a mere shift in mindsets about how we approach training, but how we enhance our knowledge and skills.

86 Rise of the altrucentric leader
While the world is seen grappling with challenging economic environment, leaders globally have felt the burnt just a little too much. This has led to the emergence of the new breed of leaders who have the courage to take their egos out of the picture and also question the status quo of leadership.

90 Harnessing women power
Fewer women leaders at senior and CXO levels have made the corporate world wake up to the harsh reality that diversity and gender inclusion is still a distant dream. While organizations can do a lot to help women employees cross the chasm, it’s up to the woman to help herself stay and grow in career, and achieve her dreams!
